2010-present Wesleyan Media Project Founder & Co-Director (<http://mediaproject.wesleyan.edu>)
The Wesleyan Media Project is the only publicly available source of real-time information on the spending and content of political advertising aired across the country during elections. The Project tracked roughly 11M federal and gubernatorial ads in 2010, 2012, 2014 and 2016. References to the Project appeared extensively in the nation's top media outlets and in local and regional along with international sources. In 2014, the Project also launched an educational initiative, AttacksAds.org, aimed at increasing information about dark money.

2002-2007 Wisconsin NewsLab Research Director, Professor Ken Goldstein, University of Wisconsin (www.polisci.wisc.edu/newsrab or www.localnewsarchive.org)
Directed the creation and continuing operation of the Wisconsin NewsLab, the most comprehensive and systematic collection and archive of local television news coverage across the nation. Designed the coding instrument, implemented data collection and processing procedures, managed and trained over 150 undergraduate and graduate student workers, and conducted descriptive and statistical analysis for all UW NewsLab projects including election coverage, health watch stories, and foreign policy news.

2001-2002 Research Assistant, Professor David Canon, University of Wisconsin – Madison
Collected detailed information on the issue content and direction of roll call votes concerning major policy issues over the last two centuries. Using Voteview to find all potentially relevant votes and the Congressional Record to provide context where needed, all yea and nay votes were coded as either for or against a certain issue (i.e. pro-immigration or anti-immigration, etc).
